My job...

I am an assistant educational psychologist, which means I work with children and young people to try to understand how they learn, think and feel. I try to find out what they are good at and what they might sometimes need help with.

What we might do...

When I come to meet you, I will tell you about myself and ask some questions about you. We might talk about what you like or find tricky, or we might play games and draw.

What happens if you don't want to work with me...

If you don't want to talk to me or work together, then that's okay. We will do as little or as much as you feel happy with.
