

Paul

What do you people like about me?

I'm reliable

I'm friendly

I can be funny

What is important to me?

- Spending time with my family and friends
- Listening to music.

How might we work together?

When I come to meet you, I will ask you about yourself and introduce myself. I will explain about some of the things we might do together, and you can ask about anything you're unsure about.

Sometimes we might talk about things you like or find tricky, or play games. Sometimes we might do some drawing or questionnaires or some tests.

What is my job?

I work with children and young people to find out what they like and don't like so much, as well as things they are good at and things they find difficult.

I use this information to help me to work with those young people and others to help make those tricky things, better.

I am an 'Educational Psychologist', but you can call me Paul.

What about if you don't want to work with me?

If you don't want to meet me and work together, that's your choice. We will do as much or as little as you feel okay with.
